The peninsula of Giens is connected to the continent by a double tombolo. It corresponds to the boundary between the Gulf of Lion and the Gulf of Genoa. The South-West part is a military zone whose access is restricted. At the south-west end you will find the Knights Point. The entire southern part of the island is composed of cliffs and forests but hosts the small port of Niel to the southwest, and the Fondue Tower to the southeast, which allows to reach the island of Porquerolles by ferry.
